The Consolidated Alpine
Gold and Silver Mining Co.

NO COMPETITION.

There is no competition in mining, everyone has the same opportunity, and courage to grasp it is indispensable to success.

Mining stock is the safest investment today, because it is not subject to a variable market. The product of mines has a standard price the world over, and a market that cannot be glutted.

Dividends of banks and railroads are affected by the prosperity of a country or a corresponding depression.

But through good times and bad times alike a mine keeps on mining, milling and refining.

The time to buy mining stock and get the largest return for the investment, is when the company is selling its first issue of treasury stock. That stock will surely increase in value as development work proceeds; and it is an easy matter to point to hundreds of companies engaged in active mining operations, to own $1,000 of whose stock would mean a regular income of no small amount. It was in buying shares at a low price, in promising times, that many of the world's wealthiest men made their millions. DIVIDENDS OF MINING COMPANIES COMPARED WITH BANKS.

The greater part of the great fortunes in this country were started from investments in mines, and in this connection some figures printed in the National Banker, under date of August 25, 1903, are interesting:

From the time of discovery to 1903, the United States has produced good mining stock will pay the investor more easily 20, 30, 40 and 100 per cent. annually than municipal bonds, railroad bonds and stock or government bonds can possibly pay 5 per cent. Money invested in a good mining stock is safer than in a bank, than in mortgages, railroad securities, municipal or government bonds.

The security of good mining stock is the raw material of money itself; it is the "staff" at whose feet governments, cities, banks, railroads, mortgages, land corporations and all forms of business kneel.

These are remarkably strong words, and yet we believe they are true. Of course, many people will assert that mining is a failure; that for every dollar taken out of the ground two dollars have been put back. All of which, however, we most respectfully deny. If precious metal mining did not yield results no one would engage in it. And, further than that, its rewards must be extraordinary rich, because men are willing to take large chances, assume hazardous risks in order to secure them. There are more mining kings than railroad kings. While mining has made millionaires and multi-millionaires, it has also produced a class of thrifty, independent men whose fortunes might not be counted much in comparison with the Clarks and others, but who are, nevertheless, the very best evidence of the profit in mining.

VALUABLE INFORMATION.

"As the masses become more educated in and conversant with the laws which govern trade, and independent class, if not actually among the wealthy class. Why is this? Because the investor has done with his money what the banker does with the depositor's—placed it where it would earn the most money in the shortest time. There are bankers in every state who have invested heavily in mining, but who would pooh-pooh the idea of similar investment if consulted by one of their depositors. There is food for serious thought here.

"But the people are thinking, and the more they think about investments of a safe and profitable nature the more money enters into the business of mining.

"It is no longer tenable to assert that mining is a gamble. Real mining is a safer business than any other we can think of, and is certainly more profitable. Men who have made their millions from mining investments are scattered all over the land and are living evidences of that fact."

WONDERFUL TRANSFORMATION.

Taking into consideration the enormous capital invested, the number of people employed and the immediate returns in money and profit, mining for the precious metals is the leading industry. The record of results has been that of steady increase from the first discovery of 1859 to the present day. But fact and figures representing merely the annual increases of production, eloquent and definite as they are, do not convey an adequate idea of the importance of the industry under the new conditions into which it has grown. The past five years has witnessed a wonderful transformation, and progress has been made by leaps and bounds. A detailed statement of these conditions would involve a review of operations in the forty-five mining counties of the State, and a history of the several great mining camps since the time when the miner turned his efforts from the bonanzas of silver to the richer fields of gold. But this enchanting and fascinating subject would fill an entire volume.

duced $2,360,000,000, in gold. Mexico at least $181,000,000, and probably twice as much, and British North America $142,000,000.

The dividends paid by gold and silver mines are greater than the dividends paid by all the banks in this country, and the dividends paid by copper mines are greater than the dividends paid by all the railroads of this country.

There certainly are good gold and silver mines yet in this country, and the new cyanide process for treating low-grade ores has made it possible to treat gold and silver ore which was formerly passed over as worthless, at a good profit.

In summing up the situation we believe that if an investor is reasonably sure that the people connected with a mining company are honest, that the money invested will be used for the purpose specified, and that the management will be conservative, he may feel that he has a reasonable chance to get a good return on his investment.

MINING INVESTMENTS PROFITABLE

Less money is lost proportionately in mining, says Cecil Rhodes than in any other business in the world, and larger fortunes are made in investments of mining stocks than any investment on earth. A cidental and consequently with the art of money getting, it is noticeable that the trend of investment is along the lines of mining and its kindred industries.

"There are reasons for this, and the wonder is that they have not been more apparent to investors with limited means in the past. But it was never the policy of masters of finance to teach the people that more money could be made in mining business than in any other. Bankers and others, whose interests it is to secure for themselves and their business money which would be diverted to the more profitable channel of mining if the public should realize what they themselves know well, that the only chance for people of moderate means to gain riches is along the lines of judicious investments, will not enlighten the public.

"A few hundred dollars might lie in a savings bank for half a century at 3 or 3½ per cent. interest, and at the end of that time the depositor would not be much richer than when he first placed it there. But there are thousands of instances where an investment of a few hundred dollars in mining stock has placed the investor in the in-
